Subject: Survey on Romantic Relationships and Careers in Academia

Dear colleague,

We are researchers at Swiss universities (EPFL, UNIL, UZH) interested in how romantic relationships shape academic careers. Romantic relationships can play a significant role in shaping academic careers, influencing career opportunities, mobility, and work-life balance. At the same time, the demands of academia -such as job competition, geographical constraints, and time pressures- can make it challenging to maintain a healthy romantic relationship.

To explore this further, our research team invites you to participate in a short survey (10-15 minutes) to deepen our understanding of how romantic partnerships may create both opportunities and challenges in academic careers. You can participate whether you are currently single, partnered, with or without children.

We understand your time constraints, but we would be very grateful if you could participate. Your input is essential to ensure that our study provides a meaningful and representative picture of career dynamics and relationship challenges within the academic system.

The survey is designed to be completed on a computer or mobile phone. Your data will be treated with the strictest confidentiality. All research findings will be published exclusively in anonymized form.

You may open the survey in your web browser by clicking the link below:

The survey will close on July 13th, after which responses can no longer be submitted.
